Q: Why won't String.replace method replace my regex backslashes in JavaScript? In the following code I've written a function that takes in a string and returns a string where all instances of a given string have been replaced with another string. In the function "string" is the string that the function is trying to replace. "backslashes" is a string of all the backslashes I'm trying to replace. function replace(string, backslashes, new_string) { var new_string_array = new_string.split(" "); backslashes_array = backslashes.split(" "); for (var i = 0; i
