I'm getting following warnings: warning: /usr/bin/ld: /tmp/ccBW11DS.o: block pointer. The definition of the block structure is internal (int block::*). See the documetation for a full list of warnings that may occur. To force linker to use external instead of internal definitions and avoid warning, use -z defs and define -U__block. I read the docs and tried to use the -U__block. But the warnings still persists. How can I solve it? A: This is a warning, not an error. It means you have some function (lets call it BlockFunc) which has a block member in its first argument. What you can do to ignore it is use a dummy argument which doesn't contain a block: def BlockFunc(f, block): pass f678ea9f9e
